

A Chronic Abuse of Innocence & Trust – July 19, 2019

For release to Major Syndicated News Media in USA, Europe and India

A good government will assist those beset with excessive misfortune that renders them financially unstable. Such misfortune can show up in the form of a natural disasters, a serious accident or a medical emergency. But the wage earner is also taxed to help those who have encountered terrible misfortune due to the unscrupulous designs of the wicked. Making ends meet is difficult enough without having someone prey on the innocent with the intent of stealing everything they own.

This is exactly what a young Rajavidya Hargreaves did to a whole community of trusting individuals. Without proper licensing Mr. Hargreaves entered into the high-risk world of ForEx trading. Promising returns that exceeded 30% APR he used other-people's-money, obtained via a Ponzi scheme payoff and a well-practiced script of lies, to build his investment fraud business. Along the way he absconded with hundreds of thousands of dollars from those who could not afford to lose any of it. He took the life savings of single women struggling to survive, and all the funds that a wheelchair bound individual relied on to pay his medical bills. Mr. Hargreaves greed drove him to forge documents that led to a foreclosure driving a responsible homeowner and his children homeless. Mr. Hargreaves just knew no bounds. Fortunately, one savvy investor eventually saw through his polished charade and took him to court when his prevarication became obvious. By then, Hargreaves had milked 12 million dollars from an international pool of good hard-working citizens. Many of those who lost everything they saved had no choice but to turn to their local government for survival assistance.

Mr. Hargreaves is a living example of how unconscionable evil devastated the lives of the those who were too trusting. After being summoned to address his dubious behavior Hargreaves continued to evade the process of reparations for over a year. His attorneys used an array of pithy loopholes to stretch the court calendar as legally thin as possible. When the clock finally ran out, Hargreaves disappeared to some unknown hiding place where he no-doubt buried his illegally obtained bars of gold.

Bernie Madoff made history in 2008 for operating the biggest Ponzi scheme the financial world has ever known. He defrauded his Wall-Street investors of over 64 billion dollars before his regime finally collapsed. By comparison the 12 million Rajavidya Hargreaves stole seems insignificant. That is until one stops to consider the added burden it put on the taxpayers who, via the government, is now footing the bill of those who became destitute.

On March 26, 2019 the High Court of Justice for the people of England issued a WARRANT FOR ARREST of Rajavidya Hargreaves. Consequently, it is unlikely Mr. Hargreaves continues to remain in Great Britain. He has formally resided in Ireland and could be in Portugal. What is important to understand is that Rajavidya Hargreaves is now an international fugitive wanted for failing to appear in the complaint against his egregious actions. (Case Number: BR-2017-000190.) Anyone who knows his whereabouts should immediately do the following:

1. Inform local police that Rajavidya Hargreaves is a wanted fugitive to be immediately arrested and held.
2. Contact Plaintiff: Brighupati Dasa (310) 854-9522 (bhrgupati@gmail.com)
And/Or paralegal: mayesvara dasa (805) 640-0405 (mdjagdasa@gmail.com) where he has been cited.

Even if Mr. Hargreaves is found in a country that may not have an extradition agreement with Great Britain, the plaintiffs who have been damaged from his criminal behavior will collect the funds necessary to bring him to face the High Court in UK. At that time, when his only alternative will be jail time, Mr. Hargreaves may become more willing to release information about where he has hidden the 12 million dollars he cheated over 60 individuals out of.
